the DISC model.

FAQ's

You have a blend of Cautious, Supportive, and Dominant traits. Your Cautious traits are probably a little stronger than your Supportive or Dominant traits.

Some words that describe you are:

- Careful,
- Focused on excellence,
- Results-oriented, and
- Collaborative

You have both outgoing and reserved traits, although you may tend a little towards a reserved perspective. You probably like to follow proven approaches to get things done in a way that protects other people's feelings. It is likely that you prefer to work alone, but you can work collaboratively with others if necessary.

Since you have three styles that show up relatively strongly, we can offer you more insights using the graphing feature that creates your PDF report inside the member's area. This is our best guess about your style blend based on the short twelve question version of our DISC assessment.

While having this information is interesting (and getting your free personalized report will allow you to use this information far more effectively), to make best use of this knowledge about yourself in order to understand, communicate with and influence others, more depth would be helpful. Over at our blog, we have some articles that will help you to understand the DISC model better.

When you build and download your free PDF, you will be able to get both information about the DISC model and more insights into your personal style blend. Of course, our full DISC assessment and report offers even deeper insights and information. We even have a way for you to purchase assessments for your team, clients, family, and friends.
